

English 12 AP Summer Reading Assignment

All seniors entering English 12 AP in the fall must read Edith Hamilton's Mythology: Timeless Tales of Gods and Heroes, which is a compilation of myths drawn from classical literature. Students must complete the following assignment.

- As you read, keep a reading log or take notes in a way that will help you to remember the characters and storylines of each myth.
- Once you have finished reading and have become familiar with the myths in Hamilton's book, find a poem (written before 1950) that alludes to one of those myths.
- Be sure, on the one hand, that the myth appears not as a brief reference but as an extended allusion; be sure, on the other hand, that the myth is not simply re-told in the whole poem. (For example, Byron's poem, "Prometheus," does not use the myth as an allusion but as the source for the poet's re-telling of the story; that kind of treatment makes the poem inappropriate for this assignment.) The poet must be using the allusion to achieve his own purpose, to enhance the larger meaning of his own poem, a poem that is about something other than the myth.
- Write a response of approximately 300 words in which you 1) explain why you would call this an extended allusion, 2) explain which parts of the original myth the poet seems to be reminding us of (either explicitly or implicitly), and 3) explain how those parts of the myth help the poet to make the larger point of the poem.
- This response must be typed, double-spaced, using 12 point Times font, with standard one-inch margins.
- Include a copy of the poem you have chosen to discuss.
- The response will be collected on the first day of class in September.

Books are available at local bookstores and libraries as well as through on-line merchants.

If you are unable to procure a copy of Hamilton's book, you may use, as an alternative, Bulfinch's Mythology, which—though longer and more challenging—you will find readily available in a number of editions and on line at the following address: <http://ebooks.adelaide.edu.au/b/bulfinch/thomas/b93fab/>.
